

The following text is about the credit card process : it starts when you send the receiving department to an account.

Once sending occurs to the receiving department, you need to create a Receiving Report.

When creating a receiving report is completed, one or more of the following paths should be executed: collecting the receiving report, gathering the vendor invoice.

The process is then divided into 3 parallel branches: stamped all documents, checking dates to avoid penalty charges, and the processing of payments.

The process has now been completed.